

LOWE SYNDROME TRUST

Dear Guests

I am delighted to welcome you here this evening to the Renaissance Chancery Court on behalf of the Lowe Syndrome Trust.

The charity was founded by Lorraine and Andrew Thomas, parents of a child diagnosed with the Lowe syndrome disease at the age of 5 years. Lorraine contacted me at this time and asked if I would be a Trustee and help raise awareness and the need for funding to support medical research of this incurable disease which affects the brain, eyes, kidneys, bones and muscles. Since that time, I have seen the amazing efforts that have resulted in the charity funding seven Lowe research projects looking at various aspects of the disease in the hope of better treatments and a cure.

I know from reading letters from parents of Lowe boys, how distressing the disease can be and not knowing what future lies ahead. Blindness, seizures, rickets, arthritis, scoliosis, weak bones and muscles... the symptoms go on....

The Trust is also actively raising awareness of the disease by participating in TV and radio programmes, newspapers, various meetings with government and has just been accepted to present at the American Society Cell Biology in the USA which will hopefully gain more interest in Lowe syndrome and future research.

I hope you have a great evening and feel proud to be part of such a wonderful cause.

Jonathan Bon
